931 P 1865

UC-NRLF

B 4 572 547

N V

1241

SHAKESPEARE.

REPRINT OF THE FIRST EDITION, The "famous folio" of 1623.

NOW READY, THE COMPLETED VOLUME OF

MR. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE'S

COMEDIES, & TRAGEDIES.

Published according to the True Originall Copies.

London: Printed by Isaac Iaggard, and Ed. Blount, 1623; and Re-Printed for L. Booth, 307 Regent Street, 1864.

The chief object in the reproduction of this, for all critical purposes the most important edition of Shakespeare extant, has been, not mere resemblance, but that it should prove "for rarely and exactly wrought"—page for page, line for line, word for word, letter for letter, ornamentation for ornamentation—as to be, excepting a more convenient fize, "one and the felf-same thing" with its prototype. That the attempt has been successful, the testimony of the most important journals of the time has satisfactorily proved.

This reprint comprises three fizes; one to range with all good Octavo Editions of Shakespeare, another to range with Knight's Pictorial and similar Editions, the third being uniform with the Original Folio.

The Small Paper, to range with a demy 8vo. volume, cloth boards, antique pattern, 1 vol. 31s. 6d.; the Large Paper, 1 vol. crown 4to. half vellum, 2l. 12s. 6d.; the Folio (of which only 100 have been printed) 1 vol. half-bound, Roxburghe style, 5l. 5s.

The Small Paper has been iffued in Parts, of which the Third and concluding Part, containing the TRAGEDIES, is now ready, in an appropriate binding, 10s. 6d. Parts I. and II. contain respectively the COMEDIES and HISTORIES.

Extracts from various Reviews which have appeared in the Public Press.

"It is ground for cordial satisfaction to find the tercentenary year has really produced a monument to Shakespeare far nobler and more appropriate than that which was projected by the National Committee. It has witnessed the publication of the three most remarkable and precious editions of his works which have been given to the public fince his own day. . . . Foremost, among these, we may place the now completed fac simile reprint of the First Folio, published by Mr. L. Booth. How many thousands among the readers of Shakespeare have longed for an opportunity of perusing that virgin text, a copy of which has been deemed cheap at one hundred pounds? Here they have it for less than a fiftieth of that sum, far handier for reading than the original, of which it is, in all respects, a faithful reproduction."—Morning Star, Jan. 16, 1865.

"The complete volume is the most accurate book of its class ever yet issued, so far as is at present known. The first two Parts are perfect as fac-similes of the original, and no deviation or error has yet been found. The third Part, so far as we have had time to test it, is equally faultless."—Birming-bam Daily Post, Jan. 16, 1865.

- "This noble tribute to the incomparable genius of Shakespeare is at length, by the issue of the third instalment of it, completed,—and so completed,—let us say in one word, triumphantly. As a tribute to a great author it is, in its way, simply unprecedented. . . . The enterprise of Mr. Booth, in thus placing within the reach of his fellow-countrymen an exact reprint of the original edition of the works of Shakespeare, not only deserves recognition at the hands of the critic, but demands encouragement from all those lettered Englishmen—'speaking the language Shakespeare spake'—who are capable of appreciating a book which is in itself one of the glories of our national literature."—Sun, Feb. 9, 1865.
- "Let us iterate and reiterate what we remarked when the first part of Mr. Booth's admirable reprint appeared. It is the most valuable affistance to the study of Shakespeare which has been offered since Shakespeare's time. Critics and commentators are of value, questionless; but when the material with which they deal is inaccessible to the reader, their value is greatly diminished. Now here is 'the famous Folio of 1623,'—the solio of Heminge and Condell—the solio which rare Ben Johnson illustrated with elegiac verse—placed within reach of the general reader."—Press, Jan. 28, 1865.
- "The only deviation from the original which has been deemed legitimate is in fize. The folio is an inconvenient fize for most readers and for most book-shelves. It was thought that, if the form of type were identical with the original, none but a pedant would object that the fize was smaller. By the use of a smaller type and a less page a volume is produced which is suitable for the hand, and ranges with the chief library editions of our great dramatist's works. As yet only one-third of the projected work is produced, the Comedies, but these give great promise of what is to come, and in paper, print, binding, and price, do not a little credit to the enterprise and taste of the publisher."—The Times, Dec. 28, 1861.
- "Mr. Booth offers us this great benefit, and will not fail to meet his reward. What he has done is, for general readers of the poet, worth more than all the criticism, and illustration, and commentary which the two and a half centuries since Shakespeare died have produced."—The Press, Jan. 18, 1862.
- "This 'cheerful femblance' of the First Folio ought to be in the library of every lover of Shakespeare, upon whose shelves a copy of the goodly volume issued by Isaac Iaggard and Edward Blount in 1623, is not to be found."—Notes and Queries, Jan. 18, 1862.
- "The reprint is executed in a flyle which furpasses the expectation to which its announcement gave rise."—Morning Post, Jan. 18, 1862.
- "Without defiring to underrate the labours which modern editors of Shakespeare have brought to bear on his plays, or to deny the services these gentlemen have rendered in clearing away many obscurities and in resolving many doubtful readings, it may with justice be said that the most commendable act performed of late years in Shakespeareology is that which places in the hands of the public a simple reproduction of the solio of 1623. That rare edition has always been the sountain-head of authority, though somewhat choked by weeds of error. In plucking these away, emendators have too often 'plucked out brain and all,' their improvements frequently serving to destroy the most Shakespearean of Shakespeare's fancies."—Daily Telegraph, Jan. 20, 1862.
- "With regard to the literal accuracy, which is the great defideratum, we believe every reliance may be placed upon it; and are affured that the greatest pains have been taken to secure its perfect fidelity."—The Critic, Jan. 25, 1862.
- "Even regarding the Folio of 1623 as a mere literary curiofity, it will be no flight boon to find the plays of our great poet reproduced in the very text in which they were first given to his countrymen, but at such a cost that almost every student may place upon his shelf a prize which heretofore none but the very wealthy could have hoped to acquire."—Daily News, Feb. 8, 1862.
- "Mr. Booth's reprint is as remarkable for beauty and accuracy as it is for cheapnefs. Indeed, we know of no book of late times which can be compared with it in the combination of all these excellencies."—The Speciator, Feb. 8, 1862.

PERICLES,

PRINCE OF TYRE.

By

MR. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

The Text from the Third Folio Edition, published in 1664; with Notices of former Editions.

LONDON.

Printed for L. Booth, 307 Regent Street, W. 1865.

I.ONDON:
Printed by J. Strangeways and H. E. Walden, 28 Castle Street, Leicester Square.

This Edition of Pericles, re-printed with the same care as exercised in the reproduction of the First Folio, is copied from the Third Impression in solio of Mr. William Shakespeares Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies, printed for P. C. London 1664, and is issued as a separate play to enable those already possessing the three Parts of the Reprint of the 1623 edition, to bind with them the Play of Pericles, the only acknowledged play of Shakespeare not printed in the "First Folio."

The following plays, in the text of the First Folio edition, have been issued separately in 4to., for the purpose of enabling collectors to complete their series of 4to. plays,—and that students may more easily note variations, these copies are interleaved,—half-bound, price sive shillings each:—

HENRY THE FOURTH, PART I.

" PART II.

HENRY THE FIFTH.

HENRY THE SIXTH, PART I.

" PART II.

,, PART III.

KING LEAR.

HAMLET.

LOVES LABOUR LOST.

MERCHANT OF VENICE.

MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

MIDSUMMER NIGHTS DREAM.

MUCH ADOE ABOUT NOTHING.

OTHELLO.

RICHARD THE SECOND.

RICHARD THE THIRD.

ROMEO AND JULIET.

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

TROYLUS AND CRESSIDA.

Pericles, Prince of Tyre.

The Editions described helow are those, as far as known, which preceded the Folio of 1664.

THE late And much admired Play, called Pericles, Prince of Tyre. With the true Relation of the whole Historie, adventures of faid Prince: As also, The no less strange, and worthy accidents, in the Birth and Life of his Daughter Mariana. As it hath been divers and sundry times acted by his Maiesties Servants at the Globe on the Banck-side. By William Shakespeare. Imprinted at Lond. for Henry Gosson, and are to be fold at the signe of the Sunne in Pater-noster row. 1609. 4to. A to I in sours; I 4 blank. 35 leaves.

THE late, and much admired Play called Pericles, Prince of Tyre. With the true Relation of the whole History, aduentures and fortunes of the sayd Prince: As also the no lesse strange and worthy accidents in the Birth and Life of his Daughter Mariana. As it hath beene divers and fundry times acted by his Maiestyes Scruants at the Globe on the Banck-side by William Shakespeare. Printed at London by S. S. 1611. 4to. Ends at I 3, verso.

THE late, And much admired Play, called Pericles, Prince of Tyre. With the true Relation of the whole History, aduentures and fortunes of the faide Prince. Written by W. Shakespeare. Printed for T. P. 1619. 4to. 34 leaves.

The fignatures are from R to Aa in fours; Bb one leaf, and title one leaf.

This edition was printed at the end of "The whole Contention betweene the two Famous Houses Lancaster and York." Printed at Lond. for T. P.

A NOTHER Edition in 1630. 34 leaves. 4to.

A NOTHER Edition in 1635. 34 leaves. 4to.

*** By the courteous permission of J. O. Halliwell, Esq. F.R.S. &c., and H. G. Bohn, Esq., the above details have been obtained from the "Skeleton Hand-list of the Early Quarto Editions of the Plays of Shakespeare," and from Bohn's "Bibliographical Account of the Works of Shakespeare," 1864.

The much admired Play,

CALLED,

PERICLES,

PRINCE of TYRE,

With the true Relation of the whole History, Adventures, and Fortunes of the said Prince.

VVritten by VV. SHAKESPEARE, and published in his life time,

 $LO \mathcal{ND} O \mathcal{N}$ , Printed for P.C. 1664.

The much admired Play,

CALLED,

PERICLES, PRINCE of Tyre.

With the true Relation of the whole History, Adventures, and Fortunes of the said Prince.

VVritten by VV. SHAKESPEARE, and published in his life time.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gower.

§ O fing a fong that old was fung, § From affees ancient Gower is come, Affuming mans infirmities, § To glad your ear and pleafe your eyes;

It bath been sung at Festivals, On Ember eves, and boly-dayes, And Lords and Ladies in their lives, Have read it for restoratives. The purchase is to make men glorious. Et bonum quo Antiquius, eo melius. If you, born in these latter times, When wits more ripe, accept my Rimes; And that to hear an old man fing, May to your wishes pleasure bring: I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you like Taper-light. This Antioch, then, Antiochus the great, Built up this City for his chiefest seat; The fairest in all Syria. I tell you what mine Authors say: This King unto him took a Peer, Who died, and left a female beir, So bucksome, blithe, and full of face, As heaven had lent her all his grace: With whom the Father liking took, And her to incest did provoke. Bad childe, worse father, to entice his own. To evil should be done by none: But custome, what they did begin, Was with long use, counted no sin.
The beauty of this sinfull Dame,
Made many Princes thither frame,

To feek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage pleafures, play-fellow:
Which to prevent, he made a Law,
To keep her still, and men in awe,
That who so askt her for his whe,
His Riddle told not, lost his life:
So for her many a wight did die,
As yon grim looks do testifie.
What ensues to the judgement of your eye,
I give my cause, who best can testifie.

Exit.

Enter Antiochus, Prince Pericles, and followers.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have ( Antiochus ) and with a foul emboldned With the glory of her praife, think death no hazard, In this enterprize.

Ant. Musick bring in our daughter, cloathed like a bride For embracements, even of Jove himself; At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd, Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence, The Senate house of Planets all did fit, To knit in her their best perfections.

E: ter Antiochus Daughter.

Per. See where the comes, apparell'd like the Spring, Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the King, Of every vertue gives renown to men:
Her face the book of praises, where is read.
Nothing but curious pleasures as from thence,
Sorrow were ever rackt, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion.

You

you gods that made me man, and fway in love, That have inflam'd defire with in my breft, To taffe the fruite of you celefiall tree, (Or die in the adventure) be my helies, As I am fonne and fervant to your will, To compaffe fuch a bondleffe happineffe.

Anti.Prince Perieles.

Per. That would be fonne to great Anticebus.

A ti. Before thee flands this faire Hesperides,
With golden fruite, but dangerous to be toucht:
For death like Dragons here affright thee hard?
Her face like heaven enticeth thee to view
Her countleffe glory, which defert must gaine:
And which without defert, because thine eye
Prefames to reach, all the whole heape must dye,
Yon sometimes famous Princes like thy selfe
Drawn by report, adventurous by defire,
Tell thee with speechlesse tongues, and semblance pale,
That without covering save yon field of starres,
Here they stand martyrs shaine in Capids warres:
And with dead cheeks advise the to desist.

For going on deaths net, whome none refift. Per. Antiochus I thank thee, who hath taught My frail mortality to know it felfe, And by those fearefull objects to prepare This body, like to them, to what I must: For death remembred, should be like a Myrrour, Who tels us, life's but breath, to trust in error: He make my will then, and as ficke men do, Who know the world, fee heaven, but feeling woe, Gripe not at earthly loves, as erft they did. So I bequeath a happy peace to you And all good men, as every prince should do, My riches to the earth from whence they came: But my vnfpotted fire of Love to you, Thus ready for the way of life or death, I waite the tharpest blow ( Antiochus) Scorning advice. Reade the conclusion then. Ant. Which read and not expounded, tis decreed As these before thou thy felie shalt bleed. Daugh .Of all faid yet, thou prove prosperous,

Of all faid yet, I with Thee happinesse.

Per. Like a bold champion I assume the listes,
Nor aske advice of any other thought,
But faithfullnesse and courage.

The Riddle.
I am no Viper, yet I feed
On mothers flesh which did me breed:
I fought a kushand, in which labour,
I found that kindnesse in a father.
Ilce's father, I nne, and kushand milde,
I Mother, W. se, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,
21s you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physick is the last? but O you Powers! That gives heaven countleste eyes to view mens actes. Why could they not their fights perpetually? If this be true, which makes me pale to read it, Faire glaste of light, I loved you, and could still, Were not this glorious Casket stor'd with ill: But I must tell you, now my thoughts revolt, for he's no man on whom perfections wait; That knowing finne within, will touch the gate: You are a fair Vyol, and your sence the strings,

Who finger'd to make man his lawfull mufick, Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken, But being plaid upon before your time, Hell only danceth at fo harsh a chime:
Good footh I care not for you.

Anti. Prince Pericles, touch not upon thy life, For that's an Article within our Law, As dangerous as the reft: your times expir'd, Either expound now, or receive your fentence.

Peri. Great King, Few love to hear the fins they love to act, "Twould braid your felf too near for me to tell it: Who hath a book of all that Monarchs do, He's more fecure to keep it that, then shewn: For vice repeated, is like the wandring wind, Blows dust in others eyes, to spread it felf; And yet the end of all is bought thus dear, The breath is gone, and the fore eyes fee clear. To stop the aire would hurt them, the blind Mole cast Copt hills toward heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd By mans oppression, and the poor worme doth die for't. Kings are earths Gods : in vice their law's their will, And if Fore stray, who dares fay, Fore doth ill. It is enough you know it, and 'tis fit; What being more known, grows worfe to fmother it. All love the womb that their Being bred,

Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. Heaven that I had it; he has found the meaning,
But I will gloze with him. Young Prince of Tyre,
Though by the tenour of our frick edick,
Your exposition mis-interpreting,
We might proceed to cancel off your daics;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree,
As your fair felf, doth tune us otherwise:
Forty daies longer we do respite you,
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shews, we'll joy in such a son:
And until then, your entertain shall be
As doth besit our honour, and your worth.

Manet Pericles selus.

Per. How curtefie would feem to cover fin, When what is done is like an hypocrite, The which is good in nothing but in fight, If it be true that I interpret false, Then were it certain you were not fo bad, As with the foul Incest to abuse your foul: Where now you'r both a father and a fon, By your untimely claspings with your child, (Which pleafures fits an husband, not a father) And the an eater of her mothers flesh, By the defiling of her parents bed, And both like ferpents are, who though they feed On fweetest flowers, yet they poison breed. Articch farewell, for wisdome sees, those men Blush not in actions blacker then the night, Will shew no course to keep them from the light: One fin (1 know) another doth provoke; Murder's as near to luft, as flame to fmoak. Poyfon and treafon are the hands of fin, I, and the Targets to put off the fhime; Then least my life be cropt to keep you clear, By flight I'le thun the danger which I fear.

Enter Antioclus,
Anti. He hath found the meaning,
For which we mean to have his head,

Н

Exit.

He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy, Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sinne In fuch a loathed manner. And therefore instantly this Prince must die, For by his fall my honour must keep high. Who attends us here?

Enter Thaliard. Thal. Doth your Highnesse call? Anti. Thaliard, you are of our Chamber, And our mind pertakes her private actions To your fecrefie; and for your faithfulness We will advance you, Thaliard. Behold, here's poison and here's gold, We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him. It fits thee not to ask the reason why: Because we bid it: fay, is it done? Thal. My Lord, 'tis done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough, Let your breath cool your felf, telling your haste.

Meff. My Lord, Prince Pericles is fled.

Art. As thou wilt live, flye after; and as an arrow, shot from a well experient Archer, hits the mark his eye doth level at : fo do thou never return, unless thou fay, Prince Pericles is dead.

Tha My Lord, if I can get him within my pistols length, I'le make him fure enough : fo farewell to your Highness. Anti. Thaliard adieu, till Pericles be dead, Exit.

My heart can lend no fuccour to my head.

Enter Pericles, Hellicanus, with other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us: Why should this change of thoughts, The fad companion dull-ey'd melancholly, By me fo us'd, a guest as not an hour, In the dayes glorious walk or peacefull night, The tombe where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet, Here pleafures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them, And danger which I fear'd, is at Antioch, Whose arme seems far too short to hit me here, Yet neither pleasures art can joy my spirits, Nor yet the others distance comfort me: Then it is thus, that passions of the mind, That have their first conception by mis-dread, Have after nourishment and life by care; And what was first but fear, what might be done, Grows elder now, and cares it be not done. And so 'tis with me, the great Antiochus, 'Gainst whom I am too little to contend, Since he's fo great, can make his will his act, Will think me speaking, though I swear to filence, Nor boots it me to fay I honour, If he suspect I may dishonor him. And what may make him blufh in being known, He'll stop the course by which it might be known, With hostile forces he'll ore-spread the Land, And with the flint of war will look fo huge, Amazement shall drive courage from the state: Our men be vanquish'd. ere they do resist, And subjects punisht, that never thought offence, Which care of them, not pitty of my felf, Who once no more but as the tops of trees, Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them,

Make both my body pine, and foul to languish, And punish that before that he would punish.

 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your facred breaft.
 Lord. And keep your mind till ye return to us peacefull and comfortable.

Hell. Peace, peace, and give experience tongue: They do abuse the King that flatter him, For flattery is the bellows blows up fin, The thing the which is flattered, but a spark, To which that spark gives heart and stronger glowing; Whereas reproof obedient and in order, Fits Kings as they are men, for they may erre, When Signior Sooth here doth proclaim peace, He flatters you, makes war upon your life. Prince, pardon me, or strike me if you please, I cannot be much lower then my knecs. Per. All leave us else: but let your cares ore-look

What shipping, and what ladings in our Haven, And then return to us: Hellicanus thou hast Moov'd us: what feeft thou in our looks:

Hell. An angry brow, dread Lord. Per. If there be fuch a dart in Princes frowns, How durft thy tongue move anger to our face ?

Hell. How dares the planets look up unto heaven, From whence they have their nourishment?

Per. Thou know'ft I have power to take thy life from Hell. I have ground the axe my felf, Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rife, prithee rife, fit down, thou art no flatterer, I thank thee for it, and heaven forbid, That Kings should let their ears hear their faults hid. Fit Councellor, and fervant for a Prince, Who by thy wifdome makes a Prince thy fervant,

What would'st thou have me do: Hell. To bear with patience fuch griefs, As you your felf do lay upon your felf.

Per. Thou speak'st like a Physitian, Hellicanus, That minister's a potion unto me, That thou would'it tremble to receive thy felf. Attend me then; I went to Antioch, Whereas thou know'st (against the face of death) I fought the purchase of a glorious beauty, From whence an iffue I might propigate, Are armes to Princes, and bring joyes to Subjects. Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder, The rest ( hark in thine ear ) as black as incest, Which by my knowledge found, the finfull father, Seem'd not to strike, but smooth: But thou know'st this, 'Tis time to fear, when tyrants feem to kifs. Which fear fo grew in me, I hither fled, Under the covering of a carefull night, Who feem'd my good Protector: and being here, Bethought what was past, what might succeed; I knew him tyrannous, and tyrants fear Decrease not, but grow faster then the years: And should he think, as no doubt he doth, That I should open to the listening air, How many worthy Princes bloud were fhed, To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope, To lop that doubt, he'll fill this Land with armes, And make pretence of wrong that I have done him, When all for mine, if I may call offence, Must feel warrs blow, who fears not innocence: Which love to all, of which thy felf art one,

Hell. Alas, fir.

Who now reproved'ft me for it.

Per.

Per. Drew fleep out of mine eyes, bloud from my cheeks, Mufings into my mind, with a thoufand doubts. How I might floo their tempestere it came, And finding little comfort to relieve them, I thought it princely charity to guieve for them.

Hell. Well, my Lord, fince you have given me leave to Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear, (speak, And justly too I think you fear the tyrant, Who either by publick war or private treason, Will take away your life: therefore, my Lord, go travel for a while, till that his rage and anger be forgot; or till the Destinies do cut the thred of his life: your Rule direct to any, if unto me, day serves not light more faithful then I'le be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith,

But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?

Hell. We'll mingle our blouds together in the earth, From whence we had our being, and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharfus Intend my travel, where I'le hear from thee; And by whose Letters I'le dispose my self, The care I had and have of Subjects good, On thee I lay, whose wisdomes strength can bear it, I'le take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath, Who shuns not to break one, will sure crack both: But in our orbes we live so round and safe, That time of both this truth shall nere convince,

Enter Thaliard folus.

Thou shewest a subjects shine, I a true Prince.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the Court, here must I kill King Pericles, and if I do it not, I am sure to be hang'd at home : it is dangerous.

Well, I perceive he was a wife fellow, and had good diferetion, that being bid to ask what he would of the King, defired he might know none of his fecrets. Now do I fee he had fome reason for it: for if a King bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.

Husht, here comes the Lords of Tyre.

Enter Hellicanus, Escanes, with other Lords of Tyre.

Hell. You shall not need my fellow-Peers of Tyrc, further to question me of your Kings departure. His sealed Commission left in trust with me, doth speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.

Thal. How the King gone?

Hell. If further yet you will be fatisfied, why (as it were unlicene'd of your loves) he would depart? I'le give fome light unto you: Being at Antioch.

Thal. What from Antioch?

Hell. Royal Antiochus (on what cause 1 know not) took some displeasure at him, at least he judged so: and doubting that he had creed on sinned, to shew his sorrow, he would correct himself; so puts himself unto the shipmans toyl, with whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. Well, I perceive I shall not be hanged now, although I would; but since he's gone, the Kings Seas must please: he scapte the Land, to perish at the Sea: I'le present my self, Peace to the Lords of Tyre.

Hell. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come with meffage unto Princely Pericles; but fince my landing I have understood, your Lord hath betook himself to unknown travels, my mes-fage must return from whence it came.

Hell. We have no reason to desire it, commended to our Master, not to us; yet ere you shall depart, this we defire as friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre. Exeunt.

Enter Cleon the Governor of Tharsus, with bis wife and others.

Clean. My Dionifia, shall we rest us here, And by relating tales of others gricfs, See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

Dion. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it, For who digs hills because they do aspire, Throws down one Mountain to cast up a higher: O my distressed Lord, even such our griefs are, Here they are but selt, and seen with mischiefs eyes, But like to groves being topt, they higher rise.

Cleon. O Dionifia,
Who wanteth food, and will not fay he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?
Our tongues and forrowes do found deep:
Our woes into the air, our eyes to weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim
Them louder, that if heaven sumber, while
Their creatures want, they may awake
Their helpers, to comfort them.
I'le then discourse our woes felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.

Dien I'le do my hess fit.

Dion. Ple do my best, sir.

Cle. This Tharfus, ore which I have the government,
A City, on whom plenty held full hand;
For riches strew'd her self even in the streets,
Whose towers bore heads so high, they kist the clouds,
And strangers nere beheld, but wonder'd at,
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one anothers glasse to trim them by:
Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to seed on, as delight,
All poverty was scorn'd and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dion. Oh 'tis true.

Cleon. But fee what heaven can do by this our change: These mouths, who but of late, earth, sea, and ayre, Were all too little to content and please, Although they gave their creatures in abundance: As houses are defil'd for want of use, They are now starv'd for want of exercise; Those pallats, who, not yet to favers younger, Must have inventions to delight the taste, Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it: These mothers who to nouzle up their babes, Thought nought too curious, are ready now To eat those little darlings whom they loved, So sharp are hungers teeth, that man and wife, Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life. Here stands a Lord, and there a Lady weeping, Here many fink, yet those which see them fall, Have fearce strength left to give them burial. Is not this true?

Dion. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witneffe it. Cleon. O let those Cities that of plenties cup, And her prosperities so largely taske, With their superfluous ryots hear these tears, The misery of Thar sus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the Lord Governor?

Cleon.

Cleon. Here, fpeak out thy forrows, which thou bring'ft in hafte, for comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried upon our neighbouring shore, A portly fail of thips make hitherward.

Cleon. I thought as much. One forrow never comes but brings an heir, That may fucceed as his inheritour: And fo in ours; fome neighbouring Nation, Taking advantage of our mifery, That stuft the hollow vessels with their power, To beat us down, the which are down already, And make a conquest of unhappy me, Whereas no glory is got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear. For by the femblance of their flags displaid, they bring us peace, and come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cleon. Thou speak'st like hymnes untuter'd to repeat, Who makes the fairest shew, means most deceit. But bring they what they will, and what they can, What need we fear, the ground's the lowest, And we are half way there: Go tell their General we attend him here, to know for what he comes, and whence he comes, and what he craves.

Lord. I go, my Lord.

Cleon. Welcome is peace, if he on peace confift; If warrs, we are unable to relift.

Enter Pericles with attendants. Per. Lord Governor, for fo we hear you are, Let not our ships and number of our men, Be like a Beacon fired, to amaze your eyes, We have heard your miferies as far as Tyre, And feen the defolation of your streets; Nor come we to adde forrow to your tears, But to release them of their heavy load. And these our ships, you happily may think Are like the Trojan horse, was stuft within With bloudy veins expecting overthrow, Are ftor'd with corn, to make your needy bread, And give them life, whom hunger starv'd half dead.

Omnes. The gods of Greece protect you,

And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arife, I pray you, arife; we do not look for reverence, but for love, and harbourage for our felf, our ships, Cleon. The which when any shall not gratifie, Or pay you with unthankfulnesse in thought, Be it our wives, our children or our felves, The curfe of heaven and men fucceed their evils: Till when, the which (I hope) shall ne're be seen, Your Grace is welcome to our Town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept, feast here a while, Untill our stars that frown, lend us a smile.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Gower. Gower. Here have you feen a mighty King His child, I wis , to incest bring : A better Prince and benigne Lord, That will prove awfull both in deed and word. Be quiet then, as men should be, Till he hath past necessity: I'le show you those in troubles reigne, Loofing a myte, a Mountain gain: The good in conversation,

To whom I give my benizon. Is still at Tharfus, where each man Thinks all is writ he spoken can: And to remember what he does, Build his Statue to make him glorious: But tydings to the contrary, Are brought t'your eyes, what need speak I. Dumb show.

Enter at one dooor Pericles talking with Cleon, all the Train with them. Enter at another door, a Gentleman with a letter to Pericles; Pericles shews the letter to Cleon, Pericles gives the Messenger a reward, and Knights him.

Exit Pericles at one door, and Cleon at another. Good Hellican that staid at home, Not to eat hony like a Drone, From others labours; for though he strive To killen bad, keep good alive: And to fulfill bis Princes defire, Saw'd one of all that haps in Tyre: How Thaliard came full bent with fin, And had intent to murder him ; And that in Tharfus was not best, Longer for him to make his rest: He doing fo, put forth to Seas, Where when men bin, there's seldome ease, For now the wind begins to blow, Thunder above, and deeps below, Makes such unquiet, that the ship Should house him fafe, is wrackt and split, And he (good Prince) having all loft, By waves, from coast to coastis tost: All perishen of man, of pelf, Ne ought escapen'd but himself; Till fortune tired with doing bad, Threw him ashore to give him glad: And here he comes; what shall be next, Pardon old Gower, thus long's the Text.

Per. Yet ceafe your ire, you angry Stars of heaven, Wind, Rain, and Thunder: Remember earthly man Is but a fubstance that must yield to you: And I (as fits my nature) do obey you. Alas, the Seas hath cast me on the Rocks, Washt me from shore to shore, and left my breath Nothing to think on, but enfuing death : Let it suffice the greatnesse of your powers, To have bereft a Prince of all his fortunes, And having thrown him from your watry grave, Here to have death in peace, is all he'll crave. Enter three Fishermen.

Enter Pericles wet.

I. What, to pelch?

2. Ha, come and bring away the Nets.

1. What patch-breech, I fay.

3. What fay you, Master?

1. Look how thou stirrest now. Come away, or I'le fetch thee with a wannion.

3. Faith Master, I am thinking of the poor men That were cast away before us, even now.

1. Alas poor fouls, it grieved my heart to hear What pittifull cries they made to us, to help them, When (welladay) we could fcarcely help our felves.

3. Nay Master, said not I as much, When I faw the Porpas how he bounst and tumbled? They fay, they are half fish, half flesh: A plague on them, they ne're come but I look to be washt. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the Sea?

1. Why

1. Why as men do a Land, The great ones eat up the little ones: I can compare our rich Mifers, to nothing fo fitly As to a Whale; he plaies and tumbles, Driving the poor Fry before him, And at last devour them all at a mouthfull. Such Whales have I heard on a'th land, Who never leave gaping, till they fwallowed The whole Parish, Church, Steeple, Bells and all. Per. A pretty Moral.

3. But Mafter, if I had been the Sexton, I would have been that day in the Belfrey.

2. Why man?

3. Because he should have swallowed me too, And when I had been in his belly, I would have kept fuch a jangling of the bells, That he should never have left, Till he cast Bells, Steeple, Church and Parish up again: But if the good King Simonides were of my mind, Per. Simonides?

3. We would purge the Land of these Drones, That rob the Bee of her honny.

Per. How from the fenny subject of the sea These sishers tell the infirmities of men, And from their watry Empire recollect, All that may men approve, or men detect. Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2. Honest, good fellow, what's that, if it be a day fits you, Search out of the Kalender, and no body look after it? Per. Y'may fee the fea hath cast me upon your coast.

2. What a drunken knave was the fea,

To cast thee in our way.

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind, In that vast Tennis-Court, hath made the Ball For them to play upon, intreats you pitty him: He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1. No friend, cannot you beg ? Here's them in our Country of Greece, Gets more with begging, then we can do with working.

2. Canft thou catch any Fishes then?

Per. I never practis'd it.

2. Nay then thou wilt starve fure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-daies, unleffe thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been, I have forgot to know; But what I am, want teaches me to think on: A man throng'd up with cold, my veins are chill, And have no more of life, then may fuffice To give my tongue that heat to ask your help: Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, For that I am a man, pray fee me buried.

1. Die ke-tha, now gods forbid, I have a gown here, come put it on, keep thee warme : now afore me a handfome fellow: Come, thou shilt go home, and we'll have flesh for all day, fish for fasting dayes and more; or Puddings and Flap-jacks, and thou shilt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, fir.

2. Hark you, my friend, You faid you could not beg. Per. I did but crave.

2. But crave? then I'le turn craver too, And so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggers whipt then?

2. Oh not all, my friend, not all : for if all your beggers were whipt. I would wish no better office, then to be Beadle. But Master, I'le go draw the Net.

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour?

1. Hark you, fir, do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

1. I tell you, this is called Pantapolis, And our King, the good Symonides.

Per. The good King Symonides, do you call him:

1. I fir, and he deferves fo to be call'd, For his peaceable reigne, and good government.

Per. He is a happy King, fince he gains from His Subjects, the name of good, by his government. How far is his Court distant from this shore ?

1. Marry, fir, half a daies journey : and I'le tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to morrow is her birth-day, and there are Princes and Knights come from all parts of the world, to Just and Turney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my defires,

I could wish to make one there.

2. O fir, things must be as they may: and what a man Cannot get, he may lawfully deal for his wives foul.

Enter the two Fisher-men, drawing up a Net.

2. Help, Master, help, here's a fish hangs in the Nct, like a poor mans right in the law, 'twill hardly come out. Ha bots on't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty Armor.

Per. An Armor, friends, I pray you let me fee it. Thanks Fortune, yet that after all crosses, Thou givest me somewhat to repair my felf: And though it was mine own part of mine heritage, Which my dead father did bequeath to me, With this strict charge, even as he left his life: Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield 'Twixt me and death; and pointed to this Brayfe: For that it faved me; keep it in like necessity: The which the gods protect thee, Fame may defend thee. It kept where I kept, I fo dearly loved it, Till the rough Seas (that spares not any man) Took it in rage, though calm'd hath given't again: I thank thee for't, my shipwrack now's no ill, Since I have here my fathers gift in's will.

1. What mean you, fir?

Per. To beg of you (kind friends) this coat of worth, For it was fometime Target to a King, I know it by this mark: he loved me dearly, And for his fake, I wish the having of it : And that you'd guide me to your Soveraigns Court, Where with it I may appear a Gentleman: And if that ever my low fortune's better, I'le pay your bounties; till then rest your debter.

1. Why, wilt thou turney for the Lady?

Per. I'le shew the vertue I have born in Armes. 1. Why take it, and the gods give thee good an't.

2. But hark you, my friend, 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough feams of the waters: there are certain condolements, certain vails; I hope, fir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had them.

Per. Believe it I will: By your furtherance I am cloathed in Steel, And fpight of all the rupture of the fea, This Jewell holds his building on my arme: Unto thy value I will mount my felf. Upon a Courfer, whose delightfull steps, Shall make the gazer joy to fee him tread; Only(my friend)1 yet am unprovided of a payre of Bafes.

2. We'll fure provide, thou shalt have My best gown to make thee a pair; And I'le bring thee to the Court my felf.

Per. Then honour be but a Goal to my will,

This day I'le rife, or elfe adde ill to ill.

Enter

Enter Simonides with attendants, and Thaifa. Are the Knights ready to begin the Triumph?

1. Lord. They are, my Liege, and stay your comming,

To prefent themselves.

King. Return them; we are ready, and our Daughter In honour of whose birth, these triumphs are, Sits here like beauties child, whom Nature gat, For men to fee, and feeing wonder at.

Thai. It pleaseth you (my royall father) to expresse

My commendations great, whose merit's lesse. King. It's fit it should be so; for Princes are A modell which heaven makes like it felf: As Jewels lofe their glory, if neglected, So Princes their Renownes, if not respected. 'Tis now your honour (Daughter) to entertain The labour of each Knight, in his device.

Thai. Which to preferve mine honour, I'le perform. The first Knight passes by.

King. Who is the first, that doth preferre himself? Thai. A Knight of Sparta (my renowned Father) And the device he beares upon his shield, Is a black Æthiope reaching at the Sun; The word; Lux tua vita mibi.

King. He loves you well, that holds his life of you.

The second Knight. Who is the second, that presents himself? Tha. A Prince of Macedon (my royall Father) And the device he beares upon his Shield, Is an armed Knight, that's conquer'd by a Lady. The Motto thus in Spanish. Pue Per doleera kee per forsa. The third Knight.

King. And what's the third?

Thai. The third of Antioch; and his device A wreathe of Chivalry: the word, Me Pompey provexit The fourth Knight. (apex. King. What is the fourth ?

Thai. A burning Torch that's turn'd upfide down; The word, Qui me alit me extinguit.

King. Which shewes that beauty hath his power and Which can as well enflame, as it can kill.

The fifth Knight. Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds, Holding out gold, that's by the touch-stone tri'd:

The Motto thus: Sic Spectanda fides. The fixth Knight.

King. And what's the fixth and last, the which the Knight himself with such a gracefull courtese deliverd? Thai. He feems to be a stranger: but his Present is A withered Branch, that's onely green at top; The Motto, In hac spe vivo.

King. A pretty morall; from the dejected state wherein he is, he hopes by you his fortunes yet may

1. Lord. He had need mean better then his outward shew can any way speak in his just commend : For by his rufty out-fide, he appeares to have practifed more the Whipstock, then the Lance.

2. Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes to an honour'd triumph strangely furnisht.

3. Lord. And on fet purpose let his armour rust Untill this day, to scowre it in the dust.

King. Opinion's but a foole, that make us fcan The outward habit by the inward man. But stay, the Knights are comming, We will withdraw into the Gallery.

Great shouts, and all cry, the mean Knight.

Enter the King and Knights from Tilting. King.Knights, to fay you're welcome, were superfluous.

I place upon the volume of your deeds, As in a Title page, your worth in armes, Were more then you expect, or more then's fit, Since every worth in shew commends it self: Prepare for mirth, for mirth comes at a feast. You are Princes, and my guests.

Thai. But you, my Knight and guest, To whom this wreathe of victory I give,

And Crown you King of this dayes happinesse. Ter. 'Tis more by fortune (Lady) then by merit.

King. Call it by what you will, the day is yours, And here, I hope, is none that envies it: In framing an Artift, Art hath thus decreed, To make fome good, but others to exceed, And you her labour'd Schollar : come, Queen oth' Feast, For (Daughter) fo you are, here take your place: Martiall the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honoured much by good Symonides. King. Your presence glads our dayes, honour we love, For who hates honour, hates the gods above.

Marsh. Sir, yonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit. 1. Knight. Contend not, fir, for we are Gentlemen, That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes, Envy the great, nor doe the low despife. Per. You are right courteous Knights.

King. Sit, fit, fit.

By Fove (I wonder) that is King of thoughts, These Cates refist me, he not thought upon.

Thai. By Juno (that is Queen of Marriage) All Viands that I eat doe feem unfavoury,

Wishing him my meat : fure he's a gallant Gentleman. King. He's but a country gentleman: has done no more Then other Knights have done, has broken a staffe,

Or fo ; let it passe. Thai. To me he feems a Diamond to Glaffe.

Per. Yon King's to me, like to my Father's picture, Which tells me in that glory once he was, And Princes fat like starres about his Throne, And he the Sun, for them to reverence; None that beheld him, but like leffer lights, Did vaile their Crowns to his supreamacy; Where now his Son, like a Glo-worm in the night, The which hath fire in darknesse none in light: Whereby I fee that Time's the King of men, For he's their Parents, and he is their grave, And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

King. What, are you merry, Knights? Knights. Who can be other in this royall presence? King. Here, with a cup that's stirr'd unto the brimme,

As you doe love, fill to your Mistresse lips,

We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your Grace. King. Yet pawfe a while; yon Knight doth fit too me-As if the entertainment in our Court, (lancholly,

Had not a shew might countervaile his worth:

Note it not you, Thaifa; Thai. What is't to me, my Father ?

King. O, attend, my Daughter, Princes in this, should live like gods above, Who freely give to every one that come to honour them: And Princes not doing fo, are like to Gnats, Which make a found, but kill'd, are wondred at: Therefore to make his entrance now more fweet,

Here,

Here, fay we drink this standing bowle of wine to him. Thai. Alasse, my Father, it besits not me, Unto a stranger Knight to be so bold, He may my proffer take for an offence, Since men take womens gifts for impudence.

King. How? doe as I bid you, or you'll move me elfe. Thai. Now by the gods, he could not pleafe me better. King. And furthermore tell him, we defire to know of Of whence he is, his name and Parentage.

Thai. The King my Father (fir) hath drunk to you. Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life. Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely. Thai. And further, he defires to know of you,

Of whence you are, your name and parentage. Per. A Gentleman of Tyre, my name Pericles, My education been in Arts and Armes. Who looking for adventures in the world. Was by the rough Seas reft of ships and men, And after ship-wrack, driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your Grace; names himself Pericles, A Gentleman of Tyre, who only by misfortune of the feas, Bereft of ships and men, cast on the shore.

King. Now by the gods, I pitty his misfortune, And will awake him from his melancholly. Come, Gentlemen, we fit too long on trifles, And waste the time, which looks for other revels. Even in your armours as you are addrest, Will very well become a Souldiers dance: I will not have excuse, with faying that Loud Musick is too harsh for Ladies heads, Since they love men in Armes, as well as beds.

They Dance. So, this was well ask'd, 'twas well perform'd, Come, fir, here's a Lady that wants breathing too: And I have heard, you Knights of Tyre, Are excellent in making Ladies trip,

And that their measures are as excellent. Per. In those that practise them, they are (my Lord.) King. Oh that's as much, as you would be deny'd

Of your fair courtesie : unclaspe, unclaspe. They Dance.

Thanks, Gentlemen, to all; all have done well, But you the best: Pages and lights, to conduct Thefe Knights unto their feverall Lodgings: Yours, fir, we have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your Graces pleafure. King. Princes, it is too late to talk of love, And that's the marke I know you levell at : Therefore each one betake him to his rest,

To morrow, all for speeding doe their best. Enter Hellicanus, and Escanes.

Hell. No, Escanes, know this of me, Antiochus from incest liv'd not free: For which, the most high gods not minding Longer to with-hold the vengeance that They had in store, due to his hainous Capitall offence; even in the height and pride Of all his glory, when he was feated in A Chariot of an inestimable value, and his Daughter With him; a fire from heaven came and shrivel'd Up those bodies, even to loathing, for they fo stunk, That all those eyes ador'd them, ere their fall, Scorn now their hand should give them buriall.

Escanes. It was very strange. (great, Hell. And yet but justice; for though this King were His greatnesse was no guard to barre heavens shaft. By fin had his reward.

Ejcan. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

1. Lord. See, not a man in private conference, Or counfell, hath respect with him but he.

2. Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof. 3. Lord. And curst be he that will not fecond it. I. Lord. Follow me then: Lord Hellieane, a word.

Hell. With me? and welcome, happy day, my Lords. 1. Lord. Know that our griefs are rifen to the top, And now at length they over-flow their banks.

Hell. Your griefs, for what?

Wrong not your Prince you love.

1. Lord. Wrong not your felf then, noble Hellican, But if the Prince doe live, let us falute him, Or know what ground's made happy by his breath: If in the world he live, we'll feek him out: If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there, And be refolv'd, he lives to govern us: Or dead, give's cause to mourn his Funerall,

And leave us to our free Election. 2. Lor. Whose death indeed, the strongest in our censure,

And knowing this Kingdome is without a head, Like goodly buildings left without a Roof, Soon fall to ruine : your noble felf, That best knowes how to rule, and how to reign. We thus fubmit unto our Soveraign.

Omnes. Live, noble Hellican. Hell. Try honours cause; forbear your suffrages: If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear, (Take I your wish, I leap into the Seas, Where's hourely trouble, for a minutes ease) A twelve-moneth longer, let me entreat you To forbear the absence of your King; If in which time expir'd, he not return, I shall with aged patience bear your yoke. But if I cannot win you to this love, Go fearch like Nobles, like noble Subjects, And in your fearch, fpend your adventurous worth, Whom if you finde, and winne unto return,

You shall like Diamonds sit about his Crown. 1. Lord. To wifedome, he's a foole that will not yield, And fince Lord Hellican enjoyneth us,

We with our travels will endeavour. Hell. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands, When Peeres thus knit, a Kingdome ever stands.

Enter the King reading of a Letter, at one door, and the Knights meet him.

1. Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides. King. Knights, from my Daughter this I let you know, That for this twelve-moneth, she'll not undertake A married life : her reafon to her felf is onely known, Which yet from her by no meanes can I get.

2. Knight. May we not get accesse to her (my Lord) King. Faith, by no meanes, the hath fo strictly Ti'd her to her Chamber, that 'tis impossible: One twelve Moons more she'll wear Dianaes livery: This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vowed, And on her Virgin honour will not break.

3. Knig. Loth to bid farewell, we take our leaves. Exit. King. So, they are well dispatcht,

Now to my daughters Letter; the tells me here, She'll wed the stranger Knight, Or never more to view nor day nor light. 'Tis well, Mistris, your choyce agrees with mine,

I like that well: nay how abfolute she's in't, Not minding whether I dislike or no. Well, I doe commend her choyce, and will no longer Have it be delayed: foft, here he comes, I must dissemble it.

Enter Perieles.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides. King. To you as much : Sir, I am beholding to you, For your fweet mufick this last night : I doe protest, my eares were never better fed With fuch delightfull pleasing harmony. Per. It is your Graces pleasure to commend,

Not my defert.

King. Sir, you are Musicks master. Per. The worst of all her Schollars (my good Lord)

King. Let me aske you one thing. What doe you think of my Daughter, fir ?

Per. A most virtuous Princesse. King. And she's fair too, is she not?

Per. As a fair day in Summer: wondrous fair. King. Sir, my Daughter thinks very well of you,

I, fo well, that you must be her Master,

And she will be your Schollar; therefore look to it. Per. I am unworthy to be her Schoolmaster.

King. She thinks not fo, peruse this writing else. Per. What's here, a Letter, that she loves the Knight of 'Tis the King's subtilty to have my life: Oh feek not to intrap me, gracious Lord,

A stranger and discressed Gentleman, That never aim'd fo high to love your Daughter, But bent all offices to honour her.

King. Thou hast bewitcht my Daughter,

And thou art a Villain.

Per. By the gods I have not; never did thought Of mine levy offence; nor never did my actions Yet commence, a deed might gain her love, Or your displeasure.

King. Traitor, thou lyest. Per. Traitor!

King. I, Traitor. Per. Even in his throat, unlesse it be a King,

That calls me Traitor, I return the lye.

King. Now by the gods I doe applaud his courage. Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts, That never rellisht of a base descent: I came unto the Court for honours cause,

And not be a Rebel to her state: And he that otherwise accounts of me, This Sword shall prove, he's honours enemy.

King. No? here comes my Daughter, the can witness it. Enter Thaifa.

Per. Then as you are as virtuous, as fair, Refolve your angry Father, if my tongue Did e're folicite, or my hand fubscribe To any fyllable that made love to you?

Thai. Why, fir, if you had, who takes offence,

At that would make me glad?

King. Yea, mistris, are you so peremptory? I am glad of it withall my heart. I'le tame you, I'le bring you in subjection. Will you, not having my consent,

Bestow your love and your affections, Upon a stranger? who, for ought I know, May be (nor can I think the contrary)

As great in blood as I my felf. Therefore hear you, Mistresse, either frame Afide.

Aside.

Your will to mine; and you, fir, hear you, Either be rul'd by me, or I'le make you-----Man and Wife; nay, come your hands And lips must seale it too : and being joyn'd, I'le thus your hopes destroy, and for further grief, God give you joy; what, are you both pleased? Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.

Per. Even as my life, or blood that fosters it.

King. What, are you both agreed? Amb. Yes, if it please your Majesty.

King. It pleafeth me to well, that I will fee you wed, And then with what haste you can, get you to bed.

Enter Gower. Now ysleep slaked bath the rout, No din but Inores about the bouse. Made louder by the ore-fee beast, Of this most pompous marriage feast: The Cat with eyne of burning coale, Now couches from the Mouses bole; And Cricket sing at the Ovens mouth, Are the blitber for their drouth: Hymen bath brought the Bride to bed, Where by the loffe of Maiden-head, A Babe is moulded, by attent, And time that is so briefly spent, With your fine fancies quaintly each, What's dumbe in shem, I'le plain with speech.

Enter Perieles and Simonides at one door with attendants, a Messenger meets them, kneeles, and gives Pericles a Letter, Pericles shewes it Simonides, the Lords kneele to him; then enter Thaifa with childe, with Lychorida a Nurse, the King shewes her the Letter, she rejoyces : she and Pericles take leave of her Father, and depart.

By many a dearne and painfull pearch Of Pericles, the earefull Search, By the four opposing Crignes, Which the world together joynes, Is made with all due diligence, That borse and saile, and bigh expence, Can Steed the quest at last from Tyre, Fame answering the most strange enquire, To th' Court of King Simonides, Are Letters brought, the tenour these: Antiochus and bis Daughter's dead, The men of Tyrus, on the head Of Hellicanus would fet on The Crown of Tyre, but he will none : The mutiny, he there bastes i' oppresse, Sayes to them, if King Pericles Come not home in twice fix Nicones, He, obedient to their doomes, Will take the Crown: the summe of this Brought bither to Pentapolis, Irony shed the Regions round, ·And every one with claps can found, Our heir apparant is a King: Who dreamt? who thought of such a thing? Brief, he must hence defart to Tyre, His Queen with child, makes her defire, Which who shall crosse along to go, Omit we all their dole and woe: Lychorida her Nurse she takes, And so to Sea; then veffell shakes,

011

On Neptunes billow, balf the flood, Hath their Keele cut : but fortune mov'd Varies again, the grifly North Differges fuch a tempest forth, That as a Duck for life that drives, So up and down the poor ship dives : The Lady shreeks, and well-a-near, Doth fall in travell with her fear : And what enfues in this felf florme, Shall for it felf, it felf perform: I nill relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey; Which might not ? what by me is told, In your imagination hold: This Stage, the Ship, upon whose Deck, The Seas toft Pericles, appeares to Speak.

Enter Pericles on Shipboord. Per. The God of this great vaft, rebuke these surges Which wash both heaven and hell, and thou that hast Upon the windes command, bind them in Braffe, Having call'd them from the deep, O ffill Thy dearning dreadfull thunders; daily quench Thy nimble fulpherous flashes: O how, Lychorida? How does my Queen? then fform venomoufly, Wilt thou spetall thy felf? the Seamans whittle Is a whisper in the eares of death, Unheard Lycborida? Lucina, oh! Divinest Patronesse, and my Wife, gentle To those that cry by night, convey thy Deity Aboard our dancing Boat, make fwift the pangs Of my Queens travels. Now, Lycborida.

Enter Lychorida.

Lychor. Here is a thing too young fur fuch a place, Who if it had conceit, would dye, as I am like to doe: Take in your armes this piece of your dead Queen. Per. How? how, Lycborida?

Lychor. Patience, good fir, doe not affift the storme, Here's all that is left living of our Queen; A little Daughter, for the fake of it

Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. Oh you gods! Why doe you make us love your goodly gifts, And fnatch them straight away? We here below, recall not what we give, And we therein may use honour with you.

Lychor. Patience, good fir, even for this charge. Per. Now milde may be thy life, For a more blufterous birth had never Babe: Quiet and gentle thy conditions; For thou art the rudelicst welcome to this world, That ever was Princes Childe: happy that followes, Thou haft as chiding a Nativity, As Fire, Aire, Water, Earth, and Heaven can make, To harold thee from the wombe: Even at the first, thy losse is more then can Thy portage quite, with all thou can't finde here: Now the good gods throw their best eyes upon it.

Enter two Saylors.

1. Sayl. What courage, fir ? God fave you. Per. Courage enough, I doe not fear the flaw, It hath done to me the worst : yet for the love Of this poor Infant, this fresh new Sea-farer, I would it would be quiet.

1. Sayl. Slack the bolins there; thou wilt not, wilt thou?

Blow and split thy felf.

2. Sayl. But Sea-room, and the brine and cloudy billow kiffe the Moon, I care not.

1. Sayl. Sir, your Queen must over-board, The Sea works high, the winde is loud, And will not lie till the Ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition. 1. Pardon us, fir; with us at Sea it still hath bin observed,

And we are strong in Eastern, therefore briefly yield her. Per. As you think meet, for she must o're-board Most wretched Queen. (ftraight, Lychor. Here she lies, fir.

Per. A terrible Child-bed hast thou had (my Dear) No light, no fire, the unfriendly Elements Forgot thee utterly, nor have I time To bring thee hallowed to thy grave, but straight Must cast thee scarcely Cosfind, in oare, Where for a Monument upon thy bones. The ayre remaining lamps, the belching Whale, And humming water must o'rewhelme thy Corps, Lying with simple shells: Oh Lychorida, Bid Nestor bring me Spices, Ink and Paper, My Casket and my Jewels, and bid Nicander Bring me the Sattin Coffin; lay the Babe Upon the Pillow; hie thee, whiles I fay A Priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman. 2. Sayl. Sir, we have a Chest beneath the hatches, Caulkt and bittumed ready.

Per. I thank thee: Marriner fay, what Coast is this? 2. Sayl. We are near Tharfus.

Per. Thither, gentle Marriner,

Alter thy course for Tyre: when canst thou reach it? 2. Sayl. By break of day, if the winde ceafe.

Per. O make for Tharfus, There will I visit Cleon, for the Babe Cannot hold out to Tyrus; there I'le leave it At carefull nurfing : go thy wayes, good Marriner, I'le bring the body presently.

Enter Lord Cerymon with a Servant.

Cer. Phylemon, hoa.

Enter Philemon.

Phil. Doth my Lord call? Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men,

It hath been a turbulent and stormy night. Ser. I have been in many: but fuch a night as this,

Till now, I ne're endured. Cer. Your Master will be dead ere you return, There's nothing can be ministred to nature, That can recover him: give this to the Pothecary, And tell me how it works.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Good morrow.

2. Gent. Good morrow to your Lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen, why doe you stirre to early?

1. Gent. Sir, our lodgings standing bleak upon the Sea, Shook as if the earth did quake: The very principles did feem to rend and all to topple,

Pure furprize and fear made me to leave the house. 2. Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early,

'Tis nut our husbandry. Cer. O you fay well.

1. Gent. But I much marvell that your Lordship Having rich attire about you, should at these early houres Shake off the golden flumber of repole; 'tis most strange, Nature should be so conversant with pain, Being thereto not compelled.

Cer. I hold it ever Virtue and Cunning.

Were

Exit.

Were endowments greater, then Nobleness and Riches, Careless heirs may the two latter darken and expend; But immortality attends the former, Making a Man a God:

Tis known, I ever have studied Physick,
Through which secret Art, by turning o're Authority,
I have together with my practise, made samiliar
To me and to my aide, the best insusions that dwells
In vegetives, in Mettals, Stones: and can speak of the Disturbances that Nature works, and of her cures;
Which doth give me a more content in course of true deThen to be thirsty after tottering Honour,
Or tye my pleasure up in silken Bags,
To please the Fool and Death.

2. Gent. Your honour hath through Ephefus,
Poured forth your charity, and hundred call themselves
Your Creatures; who by you have been restored,
And not your knowledge, your personall pain,
But even your purse still open, hath built Lord Cerimon
Such strong renown, as never shall decay.

Enter two or three with a Cheft.

Ser. So, lift there.

Cer. What's that?
Ser. Sir, even now did the Sea, toffe up upon our shore
This Cheft; 'tis of some wrack.

Cer. Set it down, let us look upon it. 2. Gent. 'Tis like a Coffin, fir.

Cer. What e're it be, 'tis wondrous heavy;

Wrench it open straight:

If the Seas stomack be o're-charg'd with gold,

'Tis a good conftraint of Fortune it belches upon us.

2. Gent. 'Tis fo, my Lord. (it up?
Cer. How close 'tis caulkt and bottom'd, did the sea cast
Ser. I never saw so huge a billow, sir, as tost it upon shore.

Cer. Wrench it open; it smells most sweetly in my 2. Gent. A delicate Odour. (fence.

Cer. As ever hit my nostrill: so, up with it.

Oh you most potent gods! what's here, a Coarse?

 Gent. Most strange.
 Ger. Shrowded in cloth of state, balm'd and entreasured With full bags of Spices, a Pasport to Apollo, Perfect me in the Characters.

Here I give to understand,
If e're this Cossin drive a land;
If king Pericles have lost
This Queen, worth all our mundane cost:
Who finds her, give her burying,
She was the Daughter of a King.
Besides this treasure for a see,
The gods requite his charity.

If thou livest Pericles, thou hast a heart That even cracks for woe: this chanc'd to night.

2. Gent. Most likely, fir.

Cer. Nay certainly to night, for look how fresh she They were too rough, that threw her in the sea. slooks, Make a fire within, setch hither all my boxes in my Closet, Death may usure on Nature many houres, And yet the fire of life kindle again the o're-prest spirits. I heard of an **Exprian* that had nine houres been dead, Who was by good appliance recovered.

Enter one with Napkins and Fire. Well faid, well faid, the fire and cloathes, The rough and wofull musick that we have,

Caufe it to found I befeech you:
The Viall once more; how thou ftirreft, thou block?
The Mufick there: I pray you give her aire;
Gentlemen, this Queen will live,
Nature awakes a warme breath out of her;
She hath not been entranft above five houres,
See how fine gins to blow into lifes flower again.

I for The heavens through you entrafe our wonder.

1. Gen. The heavens through you, encrease our wonder, And sets up your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive, behold her eye-lids,
Cafes to those heavenly jewels which Pericles hath lost,
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold
The Diamonds of a most praised water doth appear,
To make the world twice rich, live, and make us weep,
To hear your fate, fair creature, rare as you seem to be.

She moves.

Thai. O dear Diana, where am I? where's my Lord? What world is this?

2. Gent. Is not this strange?

1. Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush (my gentle neighbour) lend me your hands,
To the next chamber bear her, get linnen;
Now this matter must be lookt too, for the relapse
Is mortall: come, come, and, Esculapius, guide us.

They carry her away.

Excust omnes.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Pericles at Tharfus, with Cleon and Dionizia. Per. Most honoured Cleon, I must needs be gone, My twelve moneths are expir'd, and Tyre stands In a peace: you and your Lady take from my heart All thankfulnesse. The gods make up the rest upon you.

Cleon. Your shakes of fortune, though they hate you Mortally, yet glance full wondringly on us. (pleased Dion. O your sweet Queen! that the strict sates had You had brought her hither to have bless mine eyes with Per. We cannot but obey the powers above us; (her. Could I rage and rore as doth the Sea she lies in, Yet the end must be as 'tis: my gentle babe Alarina, Whom (for she was born at Sea) I have named so, Here, I charge your charity withall; leaving her The infant of your care, beseeching you to give her Princely training, that she may be manner'd as she is

Cleon. Fear not (my Lord) but think your Grace, That fed my Countrey with your Corn; for which, The peoples prayers daily fall upon you, must in your Childe

Be thought on, if neglect should therein make me vile, The common body that's by you reliev'd, Would force me to my duty; but if to that, My nature need a spurre, the gods revenge it Upon me and mine, to the end of generation.

Per. I believe you, your honour and your goodnesse, Teach me toot without your vowes, till she be married, Madam, by bright Diana, whom we honour, All unsister'd shall this heir of mine remain, Though I shew will in't: so I take my leave: Good Madam, make me blessed, in your care In bringing up my Childe.

Dion. I have one my felf, who shall not be more dear to my respect than yours, my Lord.

Per.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.

Cleon. We'll bring your Grace to the edge of the shore, then give you up to the masked Neptune, and the gentlest windes of heaven.

Ter. I will embrace your offer, come, dearest Madam: O no teares, Lycborida, no teares; look to your little Mistris, on whose grace you may depend hereafter: come, my Lord.

Enter Cerymon, and Thaifa.

Cer. Madam, this Letter, and fome certain Jewels, Lay with you in your Coffer, which are at your com-

Know you the Character?

Thai. It is, my Lords, that I was shipt at Sea, I well remember, even on my eaning time: but whether there delivered, by the holy gods, I cannot rightly say: but since King Tericles, my wedded Lord, I ne're shall see again, a vestall livery will I take me to, and never more have joy.

Cler. Madam, if this you purpose as ye speak, Dianaes Temple is not distant farre, Where you may abide till your date expire, Moreover if you please, a Neece of mine, Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompence is thanks, that's all, Yet my good will is great, though the gift fmall.

Enter Gower.

Gower. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre, Welcom'd and jettled to his own defire; His mofull Queen we leave at Ephefus, Unto Diana, there's a Votareffe. Now to Marina bend your minde, Whom our fast growing scene must finde At Tharfus, and by Cleon train'd In Musicks letters, who hath gain'd Of education all the grace, Which makes high both the art and place Of generall wonder : but alack That monster Envy oft the wrack Of carned praise, Marina's life Seek to take off by treason's knife, And in this kinde, our Cleon bath One Daughter and a full grown wench, Even ripe for Marriage fight : this Maid Hight Philoten : and it is faid For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be, Be't when they wear'd the fleded filk, With fingers long, small, white as milk, Or when she would with sharp needle wound The Cambrick, which she made more found By burting it, or when to th' Lute She fung, and made the night hed mute, That still records within one, or when She would with rich and constant fen, Vaile to her Mistreffe Dion still, This Phyloten contends in skill With absolute Marina : fo The Dove of Paphos might with the Crow Vie feathers white. Marina gets All praises, which are paid as debts, And not as given, this fo darks In Phyloten all gracefull markes, That Cleon's Wife with envy rare, A present Murderer do's prepare For good Marina, that her Daughter Might stand peerlesse by this slaughter.

The fooner her wile thoughts to stead, Lychorida cur Nurfe is dead, And curfed Dionizia bath The pregnant instrument of wrath Prest for this blow, the unborn event, I due commend to your content, Onely I carried winged Time, Poste on the lame seet of my rime, Which never could I so convey, Unlesse your thoughts went on my way. Dionizia doth appear, With Leonine a Murderer.

Enter Dionizia, and Leonine.

Exit.

Dion. Thy oath remember, thou haft sworn to do it, 'tis but a blow, which never shall be known, thou canst not doe a thing in the world so soon, to yield thee so much profit, let not conscience which is but cold, inflaming thy love bosome, enslame too nicely; nor let pitty, which even women have cast off, melt thee, but be a souldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I will do't, but yet she is a goodly Creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her.

Here she comes weeping for her onely Mistresse death:

Thou art refolv'd?

Leon. I am refolv'd.

Exit.

Enter Marina with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No: I will rob Tellus of her weed, to strew thy Grave with Flowers: the yellowes, blewes, the purple Violets and Marigolds, shall as a Carpet hang upon thy Grave, while Summer dayes doth last. Aye me, poor Maid, born in a tempest, when my Mother di'd: this world to me is like a lasting storme, hurrying me from my friends.

Dien. How now, Marina? why de'ye weep alone? How chance my Daughter is not with you? Doe not confume your blood with forrowing, You have a Nurse of me. Lord? how your favour's Chang'd, with this unprofitable woe: Come give me your Flowers, ere the Sea marre it, Walk with Leonine, the aire is quick there, And it pierces and sharpens the stomack; Come, Leonine, take her by the arme, walk with her.

Mar. No I pray you, I'le not bereave you of your Dion. Come, come, I love the King your Father, and your felf, with more then forreign heart; we every day expect him here, when he shall come and finde our Paragon, to all reports thus blasted. He will repent the breadth of his great voyage, blame both my Lord and me, that we have taken no care to your best courses. Go I pray you, walk and be cheerfull once again; referve that excellent complexion, which did steale the eyes of young and old. Care not for me, I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go, but yet I have no desire to it. Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you:

Walk half an houre, Leonine, at the least. Remember what I have faid.

Leon. I warrant you, Madam.

Dion. I'le leave you, my fweet Lady, for a while: pray walk foftly, doe not heat your blood: What, I must have a care of you.

Mar. My thanks, fweet Madam. Is the winde Westerly that blowes?

Leon, South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the winde was North.

Leon. Was't fo?

Mar.

Mar. My Father, as Nurse faith, did never fear, but cryed good Sea-men to the Sailors, galling his Kingly hands, hailing ropes, and clasping to the Mast, endured a Sea that almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born, never was waves nor winde more violent, and from the ladder tackle, washes off a Canvas clymer, ha, faith one, wilt out? and with a dropping industry they skip from stern to stern:the Boat-swain whiftles, and the Mafter calls and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come, fay your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer, I grant it, pray, but be not tedious, for the gods are quick of ear, and I am fworn to doe my work with hafte.

Mar. Why, will you kill me?
Leon. To fatisfic my Lady.
Mar. Why would she have me kill'd now? as I can remember by my troth, I never did hurt her in all my life, I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn to any living creature: believe me now, I never kill'd a Mouse, nor hurt a Flye. I trod upon a worme once against my will, but I wept for it. How have I offended, wherein my death might yield her any profit, or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My Commission is not to reason of the deed, but do't.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope : you are well favoured, and your looks fore-shew you have a very gentle heart, I faw you lately when you caught hurt in parting two that fought: good-footh it shewed well in you, do fo now, your Lady feeks my life, come you between, and fave poor me the weaker.

Leon. I am fworn, and will dispatch.

Enter Pirates.

Pirat. 1. Hold villain.

Pirat. 2. A prize, a prize.

Pirat. 3. Half part mates, half part. Come lets have her aboard fodainly.

Enter Leonine.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great Pirate Valdes, and they have feized Marina, let her go, there's no hope the will return: I'le fwear the's dead, and thrown into the Sea, but I'le see further, perhaps they will but pleafe themselves upon her, not carry her aboard, if she Whom they have ravisht, must by me be slain.

Enter Pander, Boult and Bawd.

Pander. Boult.

Pander. Search the market narrowly, Metaline is full of gallants, we loft too much money this Mart, by being too Wenchlesse.

Band. We were never so much out of creatures, we have but poor three, and they can doe no more then they can doe, and they with continuall action, are even as good as rotten.

Pander. Therefore let's have fresh ones what e're we pay for them, if there be not a conscience to be us'd in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Band. Thou say'st true, 'tis not our bringing up of poor baftards, as I think, I have brought fome eleven.

Boult. I too eleven, and brought them down again, But shall I search the market?

Band. What elfe, man? the stuffe we have, a strong winde will blow it to pieces, they are fo pittifully fodden.

Pander. Thou fay'ft true, there's two unwholesome in conscience, the poor Transilvanian is dead that lay with the little baggage.

Boult. I, the quickly poupt him, the made him roaftmeat for wormes, but I'le go fearch the market.

Pand. Three or four thousand Chickeens were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and fo give over.

Band. Why, to give over I pray you? Is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. Oh our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger : therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiffe to keep our door hatch'd; befides the fore termes we stand upon with the gods, will be strong with us for giving o're.

Band. Come, other forts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we, I, and better too, we offend worfe, neither is our profession any Trade, it's no calling : but here comes Boult.

Enter Boult with Pirates, and Mirana.

Boult. Come your wayes, my masters, you say she's a Sayl. O fir, we doubt it not.

Boult. Master, I have gone through for this piece you If you like her, fo; if not, I have lost my earnest. Bard. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good cloathes: there's no farther necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Band. What's her price, Boult?

Boult, I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces. Pand. Well, follow me, my Masters, you shall have your money presently: wife, take her in, instruct her what she has to doe, that she may not be raw in her entertainment

Bard. Boult, take you the markes of her, the colour of her haire, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry; He that will give most, shall have her first. Such a maiden-head were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been: Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance shall follow.

Mar. Alack that Leonine was fo flack, fo flow:

He should have struck, not spoke ;

Or that these Pirates, not enough barbarous,

Had not o're-board thrown me, for to feek my Mother.

Band. Why weep you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bard. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Band. You are light into my hands,

Where you are like to live.

Mar. The more's my fault, to scape his hands,

Where I was like to dye.

Band. I, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bard. Yes indeed shall you, and taste Gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions: what de'ye stop your eares?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Band. What would you have me to be, if I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Band. Marry whip thee, Gosling:I think I shall have fomething to doe with you. Come, y'are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have ye.

Mar. The gods defend me.

Band. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stirre you up: Boult's return'd.

Enter Boult.

Now, fir, hast thou cry'd her through the Market?

Boult.1 have cri'd her almost to the number of her hairs,

I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Baud. And prithee tell me, how do'ft thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger fort?

Boult. Faith they littened to me, as they would have hearkned to thir fathers Testament. There was a Spaniards mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Baud. We shall have him here to morrow with his best russe on.

Boult. To night, to night, but Mistris, do you know the French Knight that cowres i'th hams?

Baud. Who, Mounfieur Verollus?

Boult. I, he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation, but he made a groan at it, and fwore he would fee her to morrow.

Baud. Well, well, as for him he brought his disease hither, here he doth but repair it, I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every Nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this figne.

Baud. Pray you come hither a while, you have Fortunes comming upon you, mark me, you must feem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly, despite profit, where you have most gain, to weep that you live as you do, makes pitty in your lovers seldome, but that pitty begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a meer profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O take her home, mistris, take her home, these blushes of hers must be quencht with some present practise. Baud. Thou sayest true isaith, so they must, for your Bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith fome do, and fome do not, but Mistris, if I have bargain'd for the joynt.

Part There are 10 the joynt.

Band. Thou maist cut a morfel off the spit.

Boult. I may fo.

Baud. Who should deny it?

Come young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. I by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Baud. Boule, figend thou that in the Town, report what a fojourner we have, you'll lose nothing by custome. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn, therefore say what a parragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you mistris, thunder shall not so awake the beds of Eels, as my giving out her beauty stirs up the lewdly enclined, I'le bring home some to night.

Baud. Come your wayes, follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep, Unti'd I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose.

Baud. What have we to do with Diana? pray you go with us.

Exeunt.

Enter Cleon and Dionizia.

Dion. Why are you foolish, can it be undone? Cleon. O Dionizia, such a piece of slaughter, The Sun and Moon ne're look'd upon.

Dion. I think you'll turn a child again.

Cleon. Were I chief Lord of all this spacious world, I'd give it to undo the deed. O Lady, much less in bloud then vertue, yet a Princess to equall any single Crown of the earth, in the justice of compare, O villain, Leonine, whom thou hast positioned too, if thou had's drunk to him, it had been a kindness becoming well thy face, what canst thou say, when Noble Perieles shall demand his child?

thou fay, when Noble Pericles thall demand his child?

Dion. That the is dead. Nurfes are not the fates to fofter it, nor ever to preferve, the di'd at night, I le fay io, who can croffe it, unleffe you play the Innocent, and for an honest attribute, cry out the di'd by foul play.

Cleon. O go too, well, well, of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that thinks the pretty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence, and open this to Pericles; I do shame to think of what a Noble strain you are, and of how coward a spirit.

Cleon. To fuch proceeding, who ever but his approbation added, though not his whole confent, he did not flow from honorable courfes.

Dion. Be it so then, yet none doth know but you how she came dead, nor none can know, Leonine being gone. She did distain my child, and stood between her and her fortunes: none would look on her, but cast their gazes on Marina's face, whilst ours was blurred at, and held a Mawkin, not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorow, and though you call my course unnatural, you not your child well loving, yet I find it greets me as an enterprize of kindness perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cleon. Heavens forgive it.

Dion. And as for Pericles, what should he say? we wept after her hearse, and yet we mourn: her monument almost sinished, and her Epitaph in glittering golden characters, express a general praise to her, and care in us, at whose expense 'tis done.

Cleon. Thou art like the Harpie, Which to betray, doft with thy Angels face, Ceaze with thine Eagles talents.

Dien. You are like one, that fuperstitiously
Doth swear to th'gods, that winter kills the slies,
But yet I know, you'll do as I advise.

Exit,

Actus Quartus.

Enter Gower.

Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short, Sail feas in Cockles, bave and wish but for't : Making to take our imagination, From bourn to bourn, Region to Region. By you being Pard'ned, we commit no crime To use one Language, in each several clime, Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you To learn of me, who stands in gaps to teach you. The stages of our story Pericles, Is now again thwarting the mayward feas; ( Attended on by many a Lord and Knig $\dot{p}$ t ) To see his daughter, all his lives delight. Old Hellicanus goes along bebinde, Is left to govern it: you bear in minde Old Escanes, whom Hellicanus late Advanc'd in time to great and high estate. Well failing ships, and bounteous windes have brought This King to Tharfus, think this Pilate thought So with his steerage, shall your thoughts grone To fetch his Waughter home, who first is gone

Like moats and shadowes see them move a while, Your eares unto your eyes I'le reconcile.

Enter Pericles at one door with all his train. Cleon and Dionizia at the other. Cleon shewes Pericles the Tombe, whereat Pericles makes lamentation, puts on Sack-cloth, and in a mighty passion departs.

Gower. See how belief may suffer by foule show, This borrowed passion stands for true old woe:

And Pericles in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighes shot through, and biggest teares o're-showr'd.
Leaves Tharlius, and again imbarks, he sweares
Never to mash his face, nor cut his haires,
He put on Sack-cloth and to Sea he beares,
A tempest which his mortall Vessell teares.
And yet he rides it out. Now take we our way
To the Epitaph for Marina, writ by Dionizia.

The fairest, sweetest, and best lies here,
Who withered in her spring of year:
She was of Tyrus the King's Daughter,
On whom foule death hath made this slaughter:
Marina was she call'd, and at her birth,
That is, being proud, swallow'd some part of th'earth:
Therefore the earth searing to be o'reslow'd
Hath Thetis birth-childe on the heavens bestow'd.
Wherefore she does and sweares she'll never stint,
Make raging Battry upon shores of flint.

No vizor does become black villany, So well as feft and tender flattery. Let Pericles believe bis Daubier's dead, And bear his courfes to be ordered By Lady Fortune, while our fleare must play His Daughter woe and heavy well-a-day. In her unboly service: Patience then, And think you now are all in Metaline.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

2. Gent. No, nor never shall doe in such a place as this, she being once gone.

1. Gent. But to have Divinity preacht there, did you ever dreame of fuch a thing?

2. Gent. No, no, come, I am for no more Bawdy

House, fall we go hear the Vestalls sing?

I. Gent. I'le doe any thing now that is virtuous, but I am out of the road of rutting for ever.

Enter the three Bawdes.

Exeunt.

Pand. Well, I had rather then twice the worth of her she had ne're come here.

Band. Fie, fie upon her, she is able to frieze the god Triapus, and undoe a whole generation, we must either get her ravisht, or be rid of her, when she should doe for elyents her fitment, and doe me the kindnesse of our profession, she me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees, that she would make a Puritane of the Devil, if he should cheapen a kisse of her.

Boult. Faith I must ravish her, or she'll dissurnish us of all our Cavaleers, and make all our Swearers Priests.

Pand. Now the poxe upon her green ficknesse for me. Ba. Faith there's no way to be rid of it, but by the way to the Pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimackus disguised.

Boul. We should have both Lord and Lown, if the peevish Baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter Lysimachus.

Lys. How now, how a dozen of virginities? Band. Now the gods bleffe your Honour.

Boult. I am glad to fee your Honour in good health.

Lys. You may fo, 'tis the better for you, that your reforters stand upon sound Legs, how now? wholsome impunity have you, that a man may deale withall, and defie the Surgeon?

Band. We have one here, fir, if the would-----

But there never came her like in Metaline.

Lyf. If the'd doe the deeds of darknesse, thou would'st

Bard. Your honour knowes what 'tis to fay well e-nough,

Lyj. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, fir, white and red, you shall see a Rose, and she were a Rose indeed, if she had but------

Lys. What prethee?

Boult. O fir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a Bawd, no lesse then it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Enter Marina.

Band. Here comes that which growes to the stalke, Never pluckt yet I can affure you.

Is the not a fair creature?

Ly. Faith the would ferve after a long voyage at Sea, Well, there's for you, leave us.

Bard. I befeech your honour give me leave a word, And I'le have done prefently.

Lys. I beseech you doe.

Band. First, I would have you note, this is an honouable man.

Mar. I defire to find him fo, that I may worthily note him.

Bard. Next, he's the Governour of this Country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the Countrey, you are bound to him indeed, but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bamd. Pray you without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? he will line your Apron with Gold.

Mar. What he will doe graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Have you done?

Band. My Lord, the's not pace't yet, you must take fome pains to work her to your mannage, come, we will leave his Honour and her together.

Exit Bande.

Lyf. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, Sir?

Lyf. Why, I cannot name't but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade, please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. E're since I can remember.

Ly/. Did you go to't fo young, were you a gamester at five, or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, fir, if now I be one,

Lys. Why the house you dwell in, proclaimes you to be a creature of fale.

Mar. Doe you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and the Governour of this place.

Lys. Why? hath your principall made known unto you, who I am?

Mar.

Mar. Who is my Principal?

Ly. Why your hearb woman, the that fets feeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O you have heard some thing of my power, and fo stand alost for more serious wooing, but I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee; come bring me to fome private place, come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, shew it now, if put upon you, make the judgement good, that thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this? some more, be fage. Mar. For me that am a maid, though most ungentle Fortune have plac'd me in this Stie, where fince I came, difeafes have been fold dearer then Phyfick, O that the gods would fet me free from this unhallow'd place, though they did change me to the meanest bird that flies i'th purer aire.

Lyf. I did not think thou could'ft have spoke so well, I ne're dream'd thou could'st; had I brought hither a corrupted mind, thy speech had altered it, hold, here's gold for thee, perfever in that clear way thou goeft, and the gods strengthen thee.

Mar. The good gods preserve you.

Ly. For my part, I came with no ill intent, for to me the very doors and windows favours vilely, fare thee well, thou art a piece of vertue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been Noble, hold, here's more gold for thee, a curfe upon him, die he like a thief that robs thee of thy goodness, if thou dost hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Boult. I befeech your honour, one piece for me.

Ly. Avant thou damned door-keeper, your house but for this virgin that doth prop it, would fink and overwhelm you. away.

Boult. How's this? we must take another course with you? if your peevish chastity, which is not worth a break-fast in the cheapest Country under the coap, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel, come your waves.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it, come your way, we'll have no more gentlemen driven away, come your wayes I fay.

Enter Bands.

Bard. How now, what's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, Mistris, she hath here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Band. O abominable.

Boult. He makes our profession as it were to slink before the face of the gods.

Band. Marry hang her up for ever.

Boult. The Nobleman would have dealt with her like a Nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a Snowball, faying his prayers too.

Band. Boult, take her away, use her at thy pleasure, crack the glaffe of her virginity,& make the rest maleable. Boult. And if the were a thornier piece of ground then the is, the thall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods.

Band. She conjures, away with her, would she had never come within my doors, Marry hang you, she's born to undo us, will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up my dish of chastity, with rosemary and bayfe.

Boult. Come mistris, come your wayes with me.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold fo deer.

Mar. Prithee tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What can'ft thou wish thine enemy to be? Boult. Why I could wish him to be my Master, or rather my Mistris.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art, since they do better thee in their command; thou hold'st a place, for which the painedst fiend in hell would not in reputation change: thou art the damned doorkeeper to every cusherel that comes enquiring for his Tib; to the cholerick fifting of every rogue, thy ear is liable, thy food is fuch as hath been belcht on by infectious lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the warrs, would you, where a man may ferve feven years for the loffe of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou dost, empty old receptacles, or common-shores of filth; serve by Indenture to the common hangman, any of these wayes are yet better then this: for what thou professest, a Baboon, could be speak, would own a name too dear: Oh, that the gods would fafely deliver me from this place: here, here's gold for thee, if that thy Master would gain by me, proclaim that I can fing, weave, fowe, and dance, with other vertues, which I'le keep from boaft, and will undertake all these to teach. I doubt not but this populous City will yield many schollars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you fpeak off?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, and proflitute me to the basest groom that doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will fee what I can do for thee: If I can place thee I will.

Mar. But amongst honest women.

Boult. Faith my acquaintance lies little among them; but fince my master and mistris hath bought you, there's no going but by their confent: therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'le do for thee what I can, come your wayes.

Enter Gower.

Marina thus the Brot bel scapes, and chances Into an bonest bouse, our story saies; She fings like one immortal, and she dances As goddess-like to her admired laies: Deep Clearks spe dumbs, and with her needle composes Natures own shape, of hud, hird, hranch or herry, That even her art, sisters the natural Roses, Her Incle, Silk, Twine, with the rubied Cherry, That pupils lack s she none of noble race, Who pour their bounty on her, and her gain She gives the curfed Band. Leave we ber place, And to her Father turn our thoughts again, Where we left him at sea, tumbled and tost, And driven before the wind, he is arriv'd Here where his daughter dwels, and on this Coaft, Suppose him now at Anchor: the City striv'd God Neptunes annual feast to keep, from whence Lyfimachus our Tyrian Ship espies, His banners fable, trim'd with rieb expence, And to him in his Barge with ferwour byes.

In your supposing, once more put your sight On beavy Pericles, think this his Bark, Where what is done in action ( more of might Shall be discovered) please you sit and bark.

Exit.

Enter Hellicanus, to him two Saylors.

I. Sayl. Where is the Lord Hellicanus? he can refolve you. O here he is, fir, there is a Barge put off from Metaline, and in it is Lysimachus the Governor, who craves to come aboard, what is your will?

Hell. That he have his, call up fome gentlemen.

2. Sayl. Ho, Gentlemen, my Lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

Hell. Gentlemen, there is fome of worth would come aboard, I pray thee greet them fairly.

Enter Lysimachus.

1. Sayl. Sir, this is the man that can in ought you would, refolve you.

Lyf. Hail, reverent fir, the gods preferve you. Hell. And you to out-live the age I am, and die as I

Lyf. You wish me well; being on shore, honoring of Neptunes triumphs, feeing this goodly vessel ride before us, I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hell. First, what is your place?

Lys. I am the Governor of this place you lie before.

Hell. Sir, our vessel's of Tyre, in it the King, a man, who for this three months hath not fpoken to any one, nor taken fustenance, but to prolong his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperance?

Hell. It would be too tedious to repeat, but the main grief springs from the losse of a beloved daughter, and a

Lys. May we not see him?

Hell. You may, but bootless is your fight, he will not fpeak to any.

Lys. Let me obtain my wish.

Hell. Behold him, this was a goodly person, till the difaster that one mortal wight drove him to this.

Lys. Sir King, all hail, the gods preserve you, hail, Royal Sir.

Hell. It is in vain, he will not speak to you.

Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Metaline, I durst wager would win fome words from him.

Lys. 'Tis well bethought, she questionlesse with her fweet harmony, and other chosen attractions, would allure and make a battery through his defended parts, which now are mid-way stopt, she is all happy, as the fairest of all, and her fellow maids, now upon the levie shelter that abutts against the Island side.

Hell. Sure all effectless, yet nothing wee'l omit that bears recoveries name. But fince your kindness we have strecht thus farre, let us beseech you, that for our gold we may have provision, wherein we are not destitute for want, but weary for the staleness.

Lys. O, fir, a courtefie, which if we should deny, the most just God for every graffe would send a Caterpiller, and so inflict our Province : yet once more let me entreat to know at large the cause of your Kings forrow.

Hell. Sit, fir, I will recount it to you; but fee, I am prevented.

Enter Marina. Lyf. O here's the Lady that I fent for. Welcome fair one: Is't not a goodly present?

Hell. She's a gallant Lady.

Lys. She's fuch a one, that were I well affur'd, Came of a gentle kind and noble stock, I'd wish no better choise, and think me rarely wed. Fair and all goodnesse that consists in beauty, Expect even here, where is a kingly patient, If that thy prosperous and artificial fate, Can draw him but to answer thee in ought, Thy facred Phyfick shall receive fuch pay,

As thy defires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use my uttermost skill in his recovery, provided that none but I and my companion maid, be fuffered to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her, and the gods make her

The Song. prosperous.

Lys. Markt he your musick:

Mar. No, nor lookt on us. Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, fir, my Lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum, ha.

Mar. I am a maid, my Lord, that nere before invited eyes, but have been gazed on like a Comet: she speaks, my Lord, that may be, hath endured a grief might equall yours, if both were justly weighed, though wayward fortune did maligne my state, my derivation was from ancestors who stood equivolent with mighty Kings, but time hath rooted out my parentage, and to the world and aukward casualties, bound me in servitude, I will desist, but there is fomething glows upon my cheek, and whifpers in mine ear, Go not till be Speak.

Per. My fortunes, parentage, good parentage to equal mine; was it not thus, what fay you?

Mar. I faid, my Lord, if you did know my parentage, you would not do me violence.

Per. I do think fo, pray you turn your eyes upon me, y'are like some-thing that, what Countrey-women hear of these shews?

Mar. No, nor of any shews, yet I was mortally brought forth, and am no other then I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping: my dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one my daughter might have been : my Queens square brows, her stature to an inch, as wand-like straight, as silver voyc'st, her eyes as jewel-like, and cast as richly, in pace another Juno. Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry, the more she gives them speech; where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger, from the deck you may difcern the place.

Per. Where were you bred? and how atchiev'd you these endowments which you make more rich

Mar. If I should tell my history, it would feem like lies disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prithee speak, falsenesse cannot come from thee, for thou lookest modest as Justice, and thou seem'st a Pallas for the crowned truth to dwell in, I will believe thee, and make my fenfes credite thy relation, to points that feem impossible, for thou look's like one I loved indeed; what were thy friends? Did'st thou not stay when I did push thee back; which was when I perceived thee that thou cam'ft from good descent.

Mar. So indeed I did.

Ter. Report thy parentage, I think thou faid'st thou had'ft been toft fron wrong to injury, and that thou thought'ft thought'ft thy griefs might equall mine, if both were opened.

Mar. Some such thing I said, and said no more, but what my thoughts did warrant me was likely.

Ter. Tell thy flory, if thine confidered prove the thousand part of my endurance, thou art a man, and I have suffered like a girle, yet thou do'ft look like patience, gazing on Kings graves, and smiling extremity out of act, what were thy friends? how lost thou thy name, my most kind virgin? recount I do beseech thee, Come sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Ter. Oh I am mockt, and thou by fome infenced god fent hither to make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good fir, or here I'le ceafe.

Per. Nay I'le be patient, thou little know's how thou does startle me to call thy self Marina.

Mar. The name was given me by one that had fome power, my father and a King.

Per. How, a Kings daughter, and call'd Marina?

Mar. You faid you would believe me, but not to be a trouble of your peace, I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and bloud? Have you a working pulse, and are no Fairy? Motion? well speak on, where were you born? And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina, for I was born at fea.

Per. At fea? who was thy mother?

Mar. My mother was the Daughter of a King, who died the minute I was born, as my good Nurse Lychorida hath oft delivered weeping.

Per. O frop there a little, this is the rarest dream. That ere dull sleep did mock fad fools withall,

This cannot be my daughter; buried! well, where were you bred? I'le hear you more to the bottome of your story and never interrupt you.

Mar. You fcorn, believe me 'twere best I did give ore. Per. I will believe you by the syllable of what you shall deliver, yet give me leave, how came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The King my Father did in Tharfus leave me, Till cruel Cleon with his wicked wife,

Did feek to murther me: and having wooed a villain To attempt it, who having drawn to do't,

A crew of Pyrats came and rescued me,

Brought me to Metaline.

But, good fir, whether will you have me? why do you weep? It may be you think me an imposture, no good faith. I am the daughter to King Pericles, if good King Pericles be.

Per. Hoe, Hellicanus? Hell. Call's my Lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble Counfellor, Most wise in general, tell me if thou can'st, what this maid is, Or what is like to be, that thus hath made me weep?

Hell. I know not, but here's the Regent, fir, of Metaline, speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She never would tell her parentage, Being demanded that, she would sit still and weep.

Per. Oh Itellicanus, strike me, honored fir, give me a gash, put me to present pain, least this great sea of joyes rushing upon me, ore-bear the shores of my mortality, and drown me with their sweetnesse: Oh come hither.

Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget, Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Thar sus, And found at fea again: O Hellicanus, Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods, as loud As thunder threatens us; this is Marina. What was thy mothers name? tell me but that, For truth can never be confirm'd enough, Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, fir, I pray what is your Title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre, but tell me now my

Droun'd Queensname, as in the rest you said,

Thou hast bin god-like perfect, the heir of Kingdomes,

And another like to Pericles thy sather.

Mar. Is it not more to be your daughter, then to fay, my Mothers name is Thaifa? Thaifa was my mother, who did end the minute I began.

Per. Now bleffing on thee, rife, thou art my child. Give me fresh garments, mine own Hellicanus, she is not dead at Tharfus, as she should have been by savage Clean, she shall tell thee all, when thou shalt kneel, and justifie in knowledge, she is thy very Princes; who is this?

Hell. Sir, 'tis thee Governor of Metaline, who hearing of your melancholly, did come to fee you.

Per. I embrace you; give me my robes; I am wild in my beholding. Oh heaven bleffe my girle. But hark, what Musick's this Hellicanus? my Marina, Tell him ore point by point, for yet he seems to doat, How sure you are my daughter; but where's this musick?

Hell. My Lord, I hear none.

Per. None? the musick of the sphears, list my Marina. Lys. It is not good to crosse him, give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds, do ye not hear?

Lyf. Musick, my Lord, I hear. Per. Most heavenly musick,

It nips me unto listning, and thick slumber Hangs upon mine eyes, let me rest,

Lyf. A pillow for his head, so leave him all.
Well my companion friends, if this but answer to my just belief, I'le well remember you.

Actus Quintus.

Diana.

Diana. My Temple stands in Epbesus, Hie thee thither, and do upon mine Altar facrifice. There when my maiden priests are met together, before all the people reveale how thou at sea did'st lose thy wise, to mourn thy crosses with thy daughters call, and give them repitition to the like: or performe my bidding, or thou livest in woe: do't, and happy by my filver bow; awake and tell thy dream.

Per. Celestial Dian, Goddess Argentine,

I will obey thee: Hellicanus.

Per. My purpose was for Tharfus, there to strike The inhospitable Cleon, but I am for other service first, Toward Ephessus turn our blown sayls, Eftfoons I'le tell why, shall we refresh us, fir, upon your shore, and give you gold for such provision as our intents will need.

Lyf. Sir, with all my heart, and when you come ashore, I have another sleight.

Pericl. You shall prevaile, were it to wooe my daughter, daughter, for it feems you have been noble towards her. Lys. Sir, lend me your arme.

Per. Come, my Marina.

Exeunt.

Enter Gower.

Now our fands are almost run, More a little, and then dum. This my last boon give me, For such kindness must relieve me: That you aptly will suppose, What pageantry, what feats, what shews, What Minstrelsie, what pretty din, The Regent made in Metalin, To greet the King; so he thrived, That he is promifed to be wived To fair Marina, but in no wise , Till he had done his sacrifice, As Dian bad, whereto being bound, The Interim pray, you all confound. In fet ber'd brief ness sayls are fill'd, And wishes fall out as their will'd. At Ephesus the Temple jee, Our King, and all bis company. That he can hither come so soon, Is by your fancies thank full doom.

Exit.

Enter Pericles, Lysimachus, Hellicanus, Marina, and others.

Per. Hail Dian, to performe thy just command, I here confess my felf the King of Tyre. Who frighted from my Country, did wed at Pentapolis, the fair Thaifa, at sea in childbed died she, but brought forth a Maid childe called Marina, whom, O goddeffe, wears yet thy filver livery, she at Tharfus was nurst with Cleon, who at fourteen years he fought to murder, but her better stars brought her to Metaline, 'gainst whose shore riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard to us, where by her own most clear remembrance, she made known her felf my daughter.

Th. Voice and favour, you are, you are, O royal Pericles. Per. What means the woman? she dies, help gentlemen. Cer. Sir, if you have told Diana's Altar true, this is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no, I threw her over-board with these very armes.

Cer. Upon this Coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain.

Cer. Look to the Lady; O she's but overjoy'd. Early in bluft'ring morn, this Lady was thrown upon this shore. I opened the Coffin, found these rich jewels, recovered her, and placed her here in Diana's Temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great fir, they shall be brought you to my house, whether I invite you, look, Thaifa is recovered.

Thai. O let me look if he none of mine, my fanctity will to my fence bend no licentious ear, but curb it fpight of feeing: O my Lord, are you not Pericles? like him you fpeak, like him you are : did you not name a tempest, a birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaifa.

Thai. That Thaifa am I, supposed dead and drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better, when we with tears parted Pentapolis, the King my father gave you fuch a ring.

Per. This, this, no more, you gods, your prefeu kindnesse makes my past miseries sport, you shall do well, that on the touching of her lips I may melt, and no more he feen; O come, be buried a fecond time within these armes.

Mar. My heart leaps to be gone into my mothers

Per. Look who kneels here, flesh of thy slesh, Thaifa, thy burden at the fea, and call'd Marina, for the was vielded there.

Thai. Bleft, and mine own.

Hell. Hail Madam, and my Queen.

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me fay when I did flye from Tyre, I left behind an ancient substitute; can you remember what I call'd the man, I have nam'd him oft.

Thai. "Twas Hellicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation, embrace him dear Thaifa, this is he, now do I long to hear how you were found? how possibly preserved? and who to thank (besides the gods) for this great miracle?

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my Lord, this man through whom the gods have shewn their power, that can from first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend fir, the gods can have no mortal officer more like a god then you, will you deliver how this dead Queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my Lord, befeech you first go with me unto my house, where shall be shewn you all was found with her; how she came plac'st here in the Temple, no need-full thing omitted.

 $P_{\epsilon r}$ . Pure Dian bleffe thee for thy vision, I will offer night oblations to thee; Thaifa, this Prince, the fair betrothed of your daughter, shall marry at Pentapolis, and now this ornament that makes me look difmal, will I clip to forme, and what this fourteen years no razor toucht, to grace thy marriage day, I'le beautifie.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, Sir, my father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a Star of him, yet here, my Queen, we'll celebrate their Nuptials, and our felves will in that kingdome fpend our following dayes; our fon and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay, To hear the rest untold, Sir, lead's the way.

Exeunt omnes.

Enter Gower.

In Antiochus and his daughter, you have heard Of monstrous lust, the due and just reward: In Pericles bis Queen and daughter feen, Although affayl'd with Fortune fierce and keen, Vertue preferred from fell destructions blast, Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last.

In Hellicanus may you well defery, A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:

In reverend Cerimon there well appears, The worth that learned charity aye wears. For wicked Cleon and his wife, when Fame

Had spread their cursed deed, and honor'd name Of Pericles, to rage the City turn, That him and his, they in his Pallace burn: The gods for murder seemed so content, To punish, although not done, but meant.

So on your patiences ever more attending, New joy wait on you, here our play hath ending.

THE

THE

A C T O R S

 $\mathcal{N}$   $\mathcal{M}$   $\mathcal{M}$  E S

Antiochus a Tyrant of Greece.
Hejperides daughter to Antiochus.
Pericles Prince of Tyre.
Hellicanus. \ two Lords of Tyre.
Efeanes. \ two Lords of Tyre.
Thaliard fervant to Antiochus.
Cleon Governor of Tharfus.
Dionifia wife to Cleon.
Symonides King of Pentapolis.
Thaif a daughter to Symonides.
Marina daughter to Pericles and Thaifa.
Lychorida Nurfe to Marina.

Lysimachus Governor of Metaline.
Cerimon a Lord of Ephesus.
Philosen daughter to Cleon,
Leonine a Martherer, servant to Dionisia.
Diana, a goddes appearing to Pericles.
Gower.
Lords &c.
Knights tilting in Honor of Thaisa.
Saylors.
Pyrates.
Fishermen.
Messeners

FINIS.

= F , 4 , = 05 6 6

lie Kyyrgi

MAY 1 2 1966 8 3

13.26 0233 NO

DEC 28 1987

U.C. BERKELEY LIBRARIES

СООНОВВІБЯ

